

WATTS FAMILY FARM

The barn was part of a working dairy farm for many years. The Watts family purchased the farm in 1986 and raised their 7 daughters there.

The barn has been used to raise cattle and for several years housed many 4-H projects including dairy goats, rabbits, and chickens.

From Brian and Debbie Watts...

The block chosen is called “God’s Eye”. It is an old pattern, often used by homesteaders traveling west to remind them that America was founded on the principle of religious freedom and as a symbol of the faith that God is always present and watching over us.